ABOUT MICHELLE CURRY

Michelle has created works of art in various mediums, using oil, acrylic, watercolor, colored pencil, pastel, graphite, and some digital new media. She has done still life, landscape, and portraiture, as well as lyrical pieces that "tell a story."

Her rich and varied life experiences create a fertile creativity from which to communicate visually. She continues to work toward mastery in whatever she is working with at the moment, both in technical skill, and in conveying the subject matter.

Michelle was born partially deaf, and was trained early in lip-reading. She feels that her sensitivity to visual details is in part a cause of this defect, which goes with the "seeing" aspect of creating art. Michelle's early influences as far as art was concerned, included exposure to painting, collage, and etching, as well as studying under artists who were locally known and from the UK. Michelle became a Christ-follower in her teens and has served in various ministries throughout the years. Michelle has always had a love for the created natural world, and the environment, and this is borne out often in her subject matter choices for creating art. She loves trees, water and wildlife. Michelle early on developed a love for reading great literature, and history, as well as developing a love for, and belief in life-long learning, self-reliance, and independence, and which also gave her an interest in different cultures, sociology, theology, and psychology and science. Michelle has completed 7 years of college, earning two degrees, one in Graphic Design/ Business, and the other in Illustration, as well as maintaining honors status during college.

Michelle wears many hats in her artistic endeavors. As well as continually creating art, she does private tutoring in art for small parties and individuals, and classes for larger groups.
